I think that allowing use of cell phones on aircraft could create safety risks as well as increasing disruption in the cabin in regards to flight crew and other passengers. People tend to speak louder than usual when talking on a cell phone and I think that surrounding passengers could become annoyed (as they do in stores, on the street, other public transportation, etc.) and respond inappropriately. Also, passengers who are already nervous flyers could be pushed over the edge which could produce a chain reaction. In other words--it is a very bad idea!!